Reflective Commentary

I have chosen to create a sequel to the story Alice's adventures in Wonderland. The story begins after Alice has just woken up from being in Wonderland. In my story I have chosen to change the characters a bit. I have used the Mad Hatter and the March Hare, instead of being mad they are acting smart but worried about the problem because in their situation it affects them and they have to snap out of being themselves for a while. It is kind of like the coronavirus. People had to change due to the circumstances that have happened and the rules we have to follow. I have also used capital letters and exclamation marks to capture the queens anger during my novel/story. In my text I have also tried and twisted quotes from the end of the first book into my novel. For example the for question of the text is twisted from when Alice woke up in the first novel. I have also twisted half of the last paragraph from what Lewis Carroll said about Alice's sister has dreamt to draw two of the stories together. Over all I have tried to make an sequel to the text after Alice has changed into a more mature person and has realised that growing up is okay. Using her growing up them to make her smart and adventurous during the problems that she faces. Alice has grown up and knows what she is in the world. She has realised that she is becoming an adult, taking away most of the nonsense as she now knows what to do with her life. I have also tried to keep the weird kind of theme in the text as it is a key part to the overall story.

CHAPTER 1

Awaking from Wonderland

'Wake up Alice dear.' Said the Doormouse, as she was standing right next to her ear so she could hear her, before drifting back to sleep. 'Oh, I've had such a curious dream.' Said Alice without realising she was talking to the Doormouse and not her sister. As she was just starting to open her eyes, she noticed a strange and peculiar figure walking towards her. The figure was coming from a large tea table around ten feet away and was quite tall wearing a large top hat as if it was yet to be sold. She then realised it was the Hatter, but he wasn't his normal mad self but he looked quite worried. 'This mustn't be real, I thought this was all a dream,' thought Alice. The Hatter then approached her and said 'Well old Alice, it was about time you woke up.' Only a few minutes ago, Alice thought she was in a dream only to realise everything that happened was reality. Since Alice stood up to the Queen of Hearts and escaped Wonderland, she changed and became more mature. Alice wondered why the Hatter and his mad friends were in England.

CHAPTER 2

Upside down

'Why is it that you are here, I thought I left Wonderland and returned to England.' Alice told the Hatter. 'You did leave Wonderland, but everything is upside down you see. Wonderland has come to you. The Queen has put a curse on everyone in your world looking for you, the curse has made everyone disappear. The Queen was very cross about what you have done. She has said she would only return your people, if you return to her in Wonderland for a punishment. You are the only person who can save your people, you see Alice,' said the Hatter. Alice had noticed that the Hatter wasn't quite himself. Instead of being purely mad he was acting quite smart and considerate towards Alice and the situation. 'The time is running out, Alice. There is only a small amount of time that we have until the Queen does something bad that could be irreplaceable.' The March Hair exclaimed. 'Then we shall create a plan,' Alice said.

[Queen of Hearts Palace]

'WHERE IS ALICE!!!?' the Queen screamed to the head of the Red Knights in a terrifying tone. 'Until Alice arrives at the castle for her sentence, her whole world will vanish forever; she has two hours, if Alice doesn't come we must search the perimetres and her world until we find her. Then OFF WITH HER HEAD IMMEDIATELY!!!' For all everyone knew, the Cheshire cat heard their entire conversation as he was invisible, so he went off to tell Alice at once.

CHAPTER 3

The Plan

[England]

'Alice, Alice, what should we do then,' the Doormouse asked, in a small squeaky voice. 'I do not know. We need to defeat the Queen and save England. What can we do that possibly can help,' said Alice. 'I know it, I know what to do,' the Hatter shouted. It was the first time that everyone noticed that the Hatter might have had a good idea instead of being mad. 'Well... what is it?' the March Hare asked. 'Maybe we don't need to stop the Queen. Maybe we have to convince everyone to join our side. If we can do that we might have a chance to overthrow the Queen instead.' the Hatter tried to explain to everyone. 'That actually might work. If we can convince everyone to join our side we can take the throne away from the Queen and return everyone back to England,' Alice explained. Suddenly the Cheshire cat appeared out of nowhere. His face showed that something was wrong. 'The Queen has declared that in two hours she will search everywhere until you are killed.' the Cheshire cat explained to everyone. 'Well then we must go on our way or else I shall be killed,' Alice said hurrying through the rabbit hole returning back into Wonderland.

CHAPTER 4

Back to Wonderland

Everyone was in Wonderland. Alice and her friends hurried on and made it to the closest town. They rallied around and told everyone the plan. The people that agreed joined them and after recruiting many people they started making their way to the palace. Alice talked to the gardeners, painters and everyone from the palace that could help her. As they were getting closer they could see knights running in formation, as if someone told them what Alice was planning. Alice tried to convince them to join her side but it was no use. They were all so threatened by the Queen that they couldn't disobey her. 'They are still nothing but a pack of cards,' said Alice as she and everyone else charged through them. All of them fell down. It was almost like dominos had just fallen. The knights got back up and this time they were stronger, but the thing was they weren't fighting Alice. They had joined her side. Walking into the castle everyone had decided to join Alice until there was only the King, Queen of Hearts and the scared little white rabbit by her side.

CHAPTER 5

The Defeat

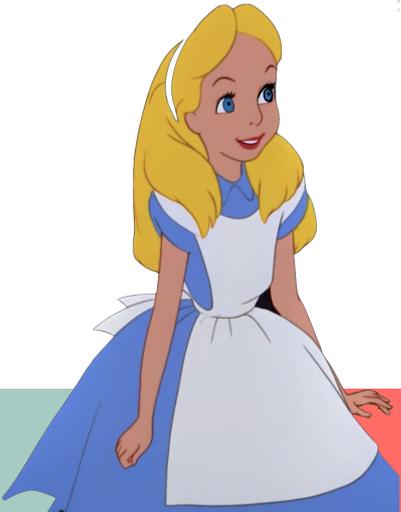

'I demand Alice to be BEHEADED AT THIS INSTANCE,' the Queen shouted at the top of her lungs. She thought the guards would take her away, but her face began to turn red as no one even moved. It was so silent that you could even hear a pin fall. Until Alice said, 'No we shall not be obeying you. A queen should be ruling a world and making it a better place. Not talking every mistake someone may do and beheading them.' Alice had once again stood up to the Queen only for the Queen to realise she was going to be defeated. The guards took the Queen and escorted her to the dungeons at the bottom of the palace. Alice had finally faced her fears by defeating the enemy. Wonderland returned to being a fun and normal world, free from drama and crimes. Everyone had appeared from England again and the Queen's sister Iracebeth became Queen. The land was never happier. The Hatter and his friends turned back into their mad selves and everyone's lives went on normally. Alice was a hero to the land and everyone was forever grateful.

CHAPTER 6

New Beginnings

After saying goodbye to everyone, Alice had returned back up the rabbit hole meeting back with her older sister. For her relief no one even noticed they were missing because they all came back the same time they disappeared. ‘Well where have you been Alice,’ her sister asked. ‘I have been on the most weird adventure.’ So Alice told her sister about what had happened during her adventures in Wonderland as her sister was drifting away into a dream. She dreamed of little Alice herself, and once again the tiny hands were clasped upon her knee, and the bright eager eyes were looking up into hers—she could hear the very tones of her voice, and see that queer little toss of her head to keep back the wandering hair that WOULD always get into her eyes—and still as she listened, or seemed to listen, the whole place around her became alive with the strange creatures of her little sister's dream.

Well, that's the time.
